THE Sport Spot

Well sport fans, we are a little late with the news of the boxing bouts in Cardston, we were waiting for a little more information, but as it hasn't come yet, here is what we know.

Raymond sent five fighters to the card in Cardston and this is what happened to them.

Young Still couldn't make his weight and so was scratched. Ray Adams and the two Richardson brothers all got through the first night Adams on a forfeit, and all three put up good fights the second night but were beaten out by good fighters. Monte Dahl emerged from three fights in the two nights with the Alberta 70 pound Championship firm in his grasp.

Much credit is due Hugh Court who had those boys under his eye all winter. He has done a very good job training with very little help if any from the local boxing brains. Hugh is liable to bring a lot more championships home if he keeps up the good work.

Appetite Is Not A Reliable Guide

Instinct is not a safe guide to good nutrition. Scientists now declare that appetite, once believed a reliable guide to what we should eat, is unreliable because of the peculiarities of individual food habits, the variety of foods available and the removal of valuable nutrients in processing, handling and preparation of foods.

The only safe diet is that based on proven rules of nutrition, they say, and Canadians are urged to study what is good for them to eat and abide by these rules.

RICHEST BLONDE—Doris Duke, the richest blonde in the world, is now a fashion writer for Harper's Bazaar. She is shown at a New York airport after a 36-hour air trip from sunny Honolulu. Britain Now Has A Modern Tanker Laid down to be fast enough to defy submarines without waiting for a convoy, a British tanker has been converted to the world's most modern vessel of her kind. She is "Heli-cina", which is not only fast but sets new standards of comfort for all the crew. On her first run from Southampton to Chicago, in the West Indies, she completed in a few hours over ten days a trip which has hitherto taken tankers 15 to 16 days to make. "Heli-cina" is notable for her size, and her modern propelling machinery. Every member of the crew has a cabin to himself, and sleeps on a spring bed above which is a reading light. The furniture of these cabins includes a writing desk, a chest of drawers, and a settee. The seamen and firemen have separate messes, but sliding doors connect the two compartments so that they can be made into one large recreation room. The messes are equipped with a leather upholstered chair for each man. St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Health LEAGUE of CANADA presents TOPICS of VITAL INTEREST

MENTAL STRAIN CAN CAUSE ARTERY ILLS

Excessive mental work is more likely than hard physical labor to cause arteriosclerosis—hardening of the arteries—and more men than women suffer from that malady.

A well-established condition of arteriosclerosis is made apparently by the rigid and tortuous condition of the arteries which, to the touch, feel like a string of beads. The earlier symptoms are less definite and often are so slight as to pass unnoticed.

These symptoms arise from a diminished blood supply, resulting from the thickened condition of the arteries which reduces their inner capacity. Naturally, symptoms vary according to parts of the body which are being deprived of a normal blood supply.

This, if the arteries supplying the brain are affected, there will be increasing loss of memory, inability to sleep properly, defectiveness of judgment, irritability and despondency. In the aged, sufferers are restless, even delirious, during the night. During the day they are drowsy.

Breathing Affected

Arteriosclerosis affecting the heart produces notable changes in the condition and functioning of that organ. The change is likely to be shown first by a shortness of breath. The attacks come on suddenly at night. Sometimes the patient is afraid to go to sleep. At others the attacks resemble bronchial asthma. In cases where the muscle of the heart is much affected, or there is a coronary defect, there is likely distress in front of the heart.

Angina pectoris may develop with disease of the coronary arteries. Finally there may be thrombosis—plugging of the vessels by a clot of blood.

HEADS COUNCIL—Elected president of the council of the French republic is Gaston Monnerville, (above), former representative for French Guiana and vice-president of the Socialist party in France. Monnerville was decorated by Gen. DeGaulle for the prominent part he played in the war as a member of the French underground.

Heredity appears to be a factor, in this disease, while typhoid fever and rheumatism have long been thought to produce changes in the arteries. Scarlet fever, diphtheria and influenza also are blamed. Infected teeth, tonsils, sinuses, gall bladder, prostate or appendix probably are exciting causes. However, diagnosis is readily made by a physician, and treatment should be directed by him.

British Children Must Go To School Till 15

LONDON. A law requiring British children to attend school until they are 15 years old, instead of 14, became effective recently.

The Ministry of Education estimated that about 130,000 children, who ordinarily would be permitted to leave school, would return to their classrooms when the fall term opens.

Government leaders insisted on raising the school age despite the serious manpower shortage. They termed the step an "investment in the nation's future." Approximately 390,000 children will reach the age of 14 this year, according to the Education Ministry.

Easy Method Of Growing Grass

To those who want to grow grass, instead of mowing it, there is reported a device which is alleged to be easy. This consists of strips of papers containing seed and fertilizer imbedded within the strips. These strips are stretched on the ground, covered with a little soil and soaked with water. The paper dissolves into the earth taking the seed and fertilizer with it and, it is claimed, grass appears in four or five days. A method of easy grass growing has been sought for centuries. If this one works, then the gardener's millennium is at hand.—Brandon Sun.

To Feel Right — Eat Right!

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By WILLIAM FERGUSON

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

MA FERGERSON'S CACHE

by MAUDE NORMAN

MA FERGERSON hurried in from the kitchen at the first sound of the phone. She felt guilty everything she thought of the extra expense it entailed, but she knew Ralph felt better knowing she had it and she had been glad many times he had insisted on having it put in before he went overseas. She did not feel so alone and cut off from everyone.

An excited voice came over the wire as she put the receiver to her ear.

"Hello, Ma Ferguson, this is Bill Paige. Now, don't get frightened, but be sure and lock all your doors and windows. Two of the prisoners have escaped from the penitentiary and the police think they are headed this way. Don't answer the door if anyone comes until you find out who it is. One of the boys from the village is coming to stay with you until they're caught."

Ma sniffed as she hung up the receiver. "One of the boys, indeed," she said scornfully. "We don't need anyone, do we, Jefferson? They'd only be tracking all over my clean floor, running outside everywhere they heard a noise. No one is going to bother us. I guess I'd better lock the door."

The obese bulldog, Jefferson, blinked his eyes, then clattered to his feet, growling.

"Land's sake, Jefferson, now don't you start making a fuss..." Her breath caught in her throat as a man appeared in the doorway, a tall man with a bleak grey face. Behind him stood another man. Ma shuddered as she looked at his eyes. They reminded her of the eyes of a toad she had watched one day when she was working in her garden, unliking and expressionless. She sank weakly into a chair as they came into the room.

Jefferson's house growls filled the room as he crouched to spring. The second man advanced toward him, seizing the heavy iron poker as he passed the stove.

Ma seized the dog around the neck and held him tightly.

"Don't you dare hurt him," she cried. "He's only trying to protect me." You, she turned to the first man. "You're the escaped prisoners, aren't you? What do you want here? I have nothing for you."

"We want money and clothes," snarled the toad-eyed man, "and if you don't shut that dog up I'll bash his head in."

"Shut up, Shorty," ordered the other, "no use in being rough with the old lady. Give us some money and clothes, ma'am, and we'll go without hurting you."

"I have no money," Ma fattered. "I am really quite poor. I do a little sewing to buy enough to eat, but that is all the income I have."

The bleak-faced man shrugged. "I hate to contradict a lady, but we were told you had a son overseas and he sent you money to save for him, and you also have your allotment check, so don't give us that story."

"How do you know so much about my business," she flared.

The cold smile did not reach his eyes. "I hope you don't think we walked out of that place without any plans, do you? We had friends in your little burg who found out all these things for us. But we are wasting time. Where is your money? And I don't like that dog's growling so much. Shut him up or we will."

Ma started to her feet. "I'll take him out to the kitchen and give him something to eat," she said. "That will keep him quiet."

The man waved her back. "You stay where you are. You'll get no chance to signal anyone. We'll find what we want. It shouldn't be hard in a place like this."

Ma sank back resignedly. "I can't stop you from tearing my house apart," she said, "but if you will get me that box of dog biscuits from the cupboard, I'll give my dog one, since his growling annoys you."

The man tossed the box in her lap. She gave the dog a biscuit, then sat holding it, silently watching the two men as they went into Ralph's room. She cried out when they came out, both dressed in his clothes.

"Those are my son's," she whispered.

"They're not quite as conspicuous as the suits we were wearing," grinned the bleak-eyed one. "Where is your money?"

"I tell you I have no money," Ma cried desperately. "Just what is in that teapot in the cupboard. Take that and go."

"Aw, quit stalling around," growled Shorty. "We've wasted too much time with you already. If I twist your arm a few times you'll be glad to tell us."

An exclamation of delight interrupted him. The other man held up an old silk package he had found in the bottom drawer of an old chest standing in the corner.

"Here it is," he cried. "Look at those knots. Come on, we'll open it when we get away from here. We haven't time now."

Ma waited until the sound of their footsteps had died away, then she tiptoed to the door and locked it. Coming back to her chair, she carefully removed the dog biscuits from the box, revealing a layer of crisp green hills.

"I'd have just died," she confided to the dog, "if they had found the money Ralph has been sending home. As soon as someone comes from the village I'm going back with them so I can put this in the bank." Then she started to chuckle. "Wish I could be around when those fellows open that package and find that Confederate money of Grandfather's I've been saving all these years."

Floating Weather Stations Planned

Safer travel for airlines traversing North Atlantic and Scandinavian routes will result from establishment of 13 floating weather stations which will operate in the Atlantic after July 1.

These stations will collect information about weather tendencies and wind velocities to be made available to all countries.

The United States will provide eight of the floating stations, Britain two sharing maintenance of a third with Norway and Sweden-France one, and Holland and Belgium one between them. Provision of these vessels was laid down in the international agreement drawn up by the provisional international civil air organization which was signed last September.

Four Royal Navy corvettes which conveyed merchant ships across the Atlantic with lend-lease cargoes during the war are being converted for use with this weather station fleet.

CAMPAIGN PAID

It is estimated that the United States would be producing 16,000,000 fewer pounds of beef a year had it not been for a bovine tuberculosis campaign started 25 years ago.

GARDEN NOTES

Try Something New

Most of us are too conservative in our gardening. For generations we have been content to grow a very limited variety of vegetables—beans, carrots, peas, lettuce and potatoes and corn covering the complete range in too many gardens.

This is a great mistake as scores of vegetables can be grown to perfection anywhere in Canada, and in addition there are usually several different varieties of each. In addition to the standard kinds noted here are many others that should be included such as head lettuce, brussels sprouts, celery, chinese cabbage, some of the white sweet corns, as well as the bantam, soy beans, peppers, musk and watermelons, broccoli, endive, cress, parsley, spinach, swiss chard, turnips, parsnips, onions, broad beans, kohlrabi, red cabbage, etc.

There has also been a vast improvement in standard sorts. Some of the old standbys of ten years ago are completely overshadowed by earlier, smoother or harder sorts. By choosing carefully from a good Canadian seed catalogue one can create a vegetable garden that will not only have much more variety than was possible a generation ago, but one that will yield higher quality and over a much longer period.

A Kitchen Garden

It is a good plan to have the smaller vegetables growing in a plot right near the kitchen door. Here they will be handy, especially when one wants to get a few onions or lettuce in a hurry, and it is amazing how much produce one can grow in such a space.

As a matter of fact, for the average smaller gardener it is best to grow all the beets, beans, lettuce, radish, carrots, etc., in rows close together in a kitchen garden of this kind than in longer rows out in the main garden. The latter, of course, is used for big, bulky crops like corn, potatoes and peas and possibly the main crops of beans, but the heavily planted, often cultivated kitchen plot near the house is an ideal location for the other stuff. Located close to the house one can often spend odd minutes in cultivating and weeding when it would not be practical to make a trip out into the big garden. Whenever possible this kitchen garden should be located where it can be watered in very dry weather.

Transplanting

Watering is one of the secrets to successful transplanting. Boxes of bedding plants and nursery stock should be kept moist and when contents are set out, water should be added. Roses, shrubs, vines and trees should be watered thoroughly in dryish weather, sending the ground at least once a week until growth is well started. To conserve moisture cultivate ornamental trees 3 feet all around until mid-summer.

CHOCOLATE CUSTARD BREAD PUDDING

1 1/2 squares Baker's Unsweetened Chocolate
2 1/2 cups milk
2 eggs
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups embed stale bread
Add chocolate to milk and heat in double boiler. When chocolate is melted, stir until blended. Beat eggs until foamy; add sugar and salt. Then add chocolate mixture gradually, stirring vigorously. Add vanilla. Place bread in greased baking dish; pour mixture over it and let stand 10 minutes. Mix well before baking. Place dish in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 50 minutes, or until pudding is firm. Serve warm or cold with cream. Serves 6.

FOAMY EGG SAUCE

Combine in top of double boiler: 1 cup plus 2 tablespoons (1 1/4 cups) sugar, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Mix well.

Add 1 1/2 cups boiling water gradually, stirring constantly. Stir and boil gently until clear.

Beat 1 egg until light and foamy. Add small amount of hot mixture, stirring well. Return to double boiler and cook and stir over simmering water 3 to 5 minutes longer.

Remove from the heat. Add 1 1/2 tablespoons butter and 2 tablespoons lemon juice or sherry—or 1 teaspoon vanilla. Serve hot. Makes 2 1/2 cups sauce. Good on chocolate, spice, or fruit puddings.

GOOD FARMERS

Although their soil has been tilled without let-up for 4,000 years, peasants in Italy's Po valley regularly harvest 60 bushels of wheat to the acre, thanks to rotation and other good agricultural practices.

$5.00 A Bushel For Flax Seed

An increase of $1.75 a bushel in the price of flax has been announced by the Federal Government, bringing the total to $5.00 a bushel and making flax one of the best potential money producing crops on the Prairies.

The price increase would appear to have come just in time to influence many farmers in their decision as to spring plantings, and indications are that the flax crop this year will be considerably larger than the one which brought close to $25,000,000 to Prairie farmers in 1946. Last year's flax crop was in the vicinity of 7 1/2 million bushels. The market can absorb much more.

MY WEEK

by R. J. Deachman

One night my son who lives in Montreal gave me a call: "Anything new," he remarked, "I haven't heard from you for a few days. How's everything?"

Now I knew that he had a ticket on the Irish Sweep and it had been run a few days before, so I remarked by way of reply: "You didn't get in horse?"

"No," he said, "I didn't, but I got my money's worth (2.50) dreaming about it—dreaming what I would do with the money, and Dad I did a mighty fine job of spending it."

Years ago I had a ticket on the same show and I too did some dreaming. I lived in the Township of Howick in the County of Huron, three miles from the village of Gorrie. All that country in the old days was one great forest, mostly hardwood, maples and elm mountainous trees they were. The pioneers who hewed homes out of that wilderness were robust men of mighty valor. There are few like them today. Where now could you find men who, with the tools these men used, would face the problems of clearing a farm in conditions such as then existed.

In the years as they passed I pondered these things in my mind. When I had this ticket I dreamed that I would win the "Sweep" that I would have $100,000, with the $100,000 I would buy back the old farm, plant it in trees, return it to forest, a replica, so far as I could make it of what it once was. Here too the trees were mostly maple and elm, the higher levels, basswood, well here and there a butternut in the lower areas. "How" trees grow in the beaver meadow close to the creek. How gorgeous they were in May! In the fence corners when I knew it there were a few clumps of wild plum and choke-cherry trees. We robbed them every year & broke the branches.

When I had it all planted and the trees growing I would donate it to the Township of Howick to be maintained as a permanent forest as a memorial to the men who, in lifetime accomplished the impossible, cleared the land, built homes and barns, lived to change a wilderness into a great farming area. They were part of what could be done by honest toil, a thing which today there is a tendency to despise. There are easier ways of getting rich now, at least we think there are. I wonder if there are better ways of making a life.

How long would it take for those planted trees to grow into a forest as it was in the days of my father? I don't know. It seems to me that 100 years would do the trick. It's a short space of time in the life of a people. Once the trees started to grow and their purpose became visible it would become a living monument which would be more suitable than the ones we now have in the west. There they would serve a different purpose. Here in Ontario we should have them in every county, perhaps in every township, a forest memorial of fifty acres, or even a hundred—a living tribute to the greatness of the men who made the nation.

ROTE SPOKES

News Items From Rotary

On Monday fifteen Rotarians met for their weekly dinner meeting at the Second Ward. The roving eye of "yours truly" missed Alma, Scott, Lee, Heber, Jim, Lou, and Myron. I don't hesitate to say you passed up a better meal than you got at home—because it was delicious—and besides, look at the friendly companionship you have missed for this week.

We were all glad to see Mose in attendance after his long bout with pneumonia. He expressed his appreciation of the flowers sent to him by the club.

The usual sing-song was passed up this week, for in spite of being a very high class collection of warblers it was felt we could not do justice without Rot's capable accompaniment.

A letter was read by President Rot asking club to assist in Cerebral Palsy Canvass. A majority, after some discussion voted in favor of lending our help. This matter again brought up the question of "Community Chest" and a vote taken favored having Secretary Shirley write the Town Council advising that the Rotary Club is in favor of and will back such an organization. Warren Jones was delegated by the Club to represent them at a meeting of officials from the "C.P. Travelling Clinic" with the idea of offering the Club's co-operation and assistance in endeavoring to have them visit Raymond and making TB tests of all those desirous of obtaining the same.

For the program Orvin and Rot reported on their respective trips across the line. Orvin mentioned the roads, which are one of the things that never fail to impress those of us going south. He reports now but said that seeding has been going on for some time with some of the peas already crowding 7 ft. in height.

He reported that the general attitude of the people was optimistic for the future in spite of some distrust of Moscow's views. This leads us to comment that: "In a world that always forgets too soon, let every man remember that a confused and uncertain world striving for peace is far better than a world at war."

One of Rot's high lights was the driving of Melvin King in a Ab Jenkins. He was impressed by the modern stores and seemingly plentiful supply of all types of consumer merchandise. He commented that prices were higher in several staple lines and seemed to feel that we live in a pretty good land. Rot feels that in a comparison of towns of like population Raymond comes off a rather poor second. He is, however, optimistic over the future of our town and feels that it is a matter of education in civic pride, and in keeping all service clubs and organizations civic minded.

These comments evoked some comment among all members. One view was expressed that twenty years ago our community was twenty years behind comparable towns south of the border while now instead of having closed the gap it was thirty years behind. This posed the question as to how Raymond stacked up against other comparable towns in Western Canada—whether our lack of civic progress was a local condition or something that exists all through Western Canada. Our program Committee might take note that this subject might make an interesting program at some future meeting. It worked along the lines of a panel discussion.

Next meeting, Monday, April 21st same time, same place, so we will see you all at 12:05.

Until then this is your Rot. Reporter who says: "Despite all the social services and reforms started by do-gooders seeking utopia, the wicked old world runs along about as badly as ever—but it runs."

This may be the crisis that we're not supposed to get over. We may have to change.

We have wanted the fruits of democracy without the pain of producing them.

THE CARDSTON PIONEERS

These are the emotions which will stir every heart. And while descendants will be loving and honoring the memories of the pioneers of Utah, there will be many who at the same time will pause to remember the first pioneers of our Canadian West for they too were filled with courage and faith.

In 1902 at a gathering of Cardston oldtimers, a picture was taken of a group of original pioneers. Their names are as follows: President Charles Ora Card, "Aunt" Zina Y. Card, John A. Woolf, Henry L. Illman, Josiah A. Hammer, Samuel Malkin, Frank Love, John Love, Sterling Williams, S.M. Woolf, Annie Daines Snow, Orson Daines, J.H. Anderson, Samuel O. Anderson, Lucinda Layne Woolf, Mary E. Woolf, Ihey, Elizabeth I. Hammer, Attina Bates Williams, Sena Malkin, Mary L. Woolf, Sarah H. Daines, Hannah Anderson, Jaee E. Woolf Bates, O. Earnest Bates, John W. Woolf, Johanna Anderson, Lewis Illman, Milton W. Woolf, Zina Card Brown, Lee Ora Malkin, Zina Woolf Hickman, Mary Anderson Layton, Persha Love and Joseph Y. Card.

Surely it is worth while thus to mark on the minds of the present generation the nobility of purpose and the strength of character of their Canadian ancestors; to help them to more keenly sense the debt they owe to those first settlers who established the town of Cardston in Alberta.

Charles Ora Card was among the first to play an important part in the early development of Alberta.

It was in the fall of 1886 that President John Taylor sent Mr. Card to Idaho, Washington and British Columbia to investigate and find a suitable place of settlement for a colony of Latter Day Saints.

At first Mr. Card wanted to go to Mexico to locate a colony, but President John Taylor advised him to go to Canada where he said he would find British justice. With two companions, C.O. Card left for Canada in March 1887 arriving on Lees Creek May 1st. They proceeded at once to break a half acre of land on the creek bottom, which was soon prepared and planted to early garden vegetables. Mr. Card held the Sabbath Day in song, speaking, testimony bearing and reverence.

In the evening they gather around the camp fire and sing and play the counts of this new land and early in April 1887 ten families left their comfortable homes in Utah to come to Canada. These pioneers met with many hardships. The trek to Alberta was slow and difficult. They drove for days before water, grass and wood could be found.

It is said that at Helena Mont. there was such a shortage of water that the younger children had to be bathed in milk and adults had to go without or take a sponge bath. Jane Woolf Bates describes the trek from Utah to Cardston as follows: "Some wagons carried a crate of chickens on the back and some times a new born calf. The cows often became lame with cracked hoofs or with gravel in them, then stop over for two or three days were necessary. In those days there were no good roads, only wagon trails with ruts, tree stumps and roots, stones and snow or rain adding to the discomforts."

An amusing incident is related as the company was nearing Helena. A horseman in a khaki suit rode near and tied his horse to a fence. John Woolf, 17½ years old then, kept his eye on the stranger and noticed that he haled one of the wagons which stopped. The stranger got up into the wagon and young Johnny shouted to his father: "Pa that old galoot is getting in Aunt Zina's wagon; now he's kissing her!" The stranger happened to be Charles Ora Card. These pioneers observed the Sabbath Day in song, speaking, testimony bearing and reverence.

In the evening they gather around the camp fire and sing and play the

Prison Reform

PRISON REFORM IS A SUBJECT in which many people in Canada are deeply interested. Before the war, a Royal Commission investigated Canada's prison system and that of other countries, and had the war not come, it is probable that steps would have been taken long before this to act upon some of the recommendations for improvements in Canada's penal system handed down by this Commission. During the war, lack of money, trained personnel and other essential factors made it impossible for action to be taken in this matter, but now that many of the obstacles have been removed, there are many people who are most anxious that the question of prison reform should again be given earnest consideration.

Noted Jurist Favors Reform

Mr. Justice J. C. McTuer, who is Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario and president of the Canadian Bar Association, was a member of the Royal Commission investigating Canada's prison system, and he is one of those who are in favor of changes in our present methods of dealing with criminals. In a recent public address on this subject, Chief Justice McTuer recommended the reorganization of the personnel in prisons, planned segregation of confirmed criminals, the development of a comprehensive adult probation system and an organized system of rehabilitation. He also suggested the creation of a department of government which would investigate the causes of crime, study ways and means of crime prevention, and provide the most modern and scientific means of prevention.

Has Aroused Wide Interest

There are many people who are of the same opinion as Chief Justice McTuer in regard to the need for reform in Canada's present penal system. The matter of dealing with first offenders and with juvenile delinquents is of the greatest importance, for under conditions as they are now, prison sentences for criminals of this class often mean that they come into contact with hardened criminals, and are themselves hardened, when they are in great need of intelligent correction. The question of rehabilitation of offenders upon their release from prison is also a most important factor in cutting down crime and increasing the social welfare of the country. It is probable that a great deal will be heard in Canada in regard to the need for prison reform in the near future, and it is a matter which deserves the consideration and interest of all responsible citizens.

Russians Welcome Winston Churchill

That crusty old warrior, Winston Churchill, who not long ago was called a "warmonger" by Premier Stalin, stole the show at a Russian Embassy reception in London honoring 20 visiting members of the Supreme Soviet.

When the former Prime Minister and Mrs. Churchill entered, the men from the land of the Red Star rushed forward and plied him with vigorous handshakes and rounds of vodka. Five hundred persons, including Prime Minister Attlee, were present as the Churchills made their way through the guests beneath a floodlit portrait of Stalin into the ambassador's private room.

The Churchills sat in big armchairs surrounded by a constantly changing circle of admirers or professed admirers. The vodka toasts were frequent.

Then when the Churchills decided to leave the guests formed an informal line through which the former Prime Minister moved slowly, shaking hands and saying goodbye.

A British official who watched commented: "One of the most impressive of all Anglo-Russian demonstrations in recent years."

NO ALLOWANCES FOR CHILDREN WHO SKIP SCHOOL

OTTAWA.—Children who skip school regularly don't get family allowances, Health Minister Martin disclosed in the Commons.

In a return tabled for L. O. Briethaupt (L.—Waterloo), the minister said that arrangements have been made in each province for provincial school authorities to notify regional family allowance offices when the school attendance of a child became unsatisfactory.

On receipt of such information, the office suspended allowances until the child's attendance became satisfactory.

Cheerful News For Car Owners

According to the Detroit Free Press the Automobile Manufacturers Association furnishes a word of cheer for a gloomy old world.

It reports that the Society of Automotive Engineers has recommended standardization of heights of bumpers on all passenger cars and light trucks.

This means that in the not too distant future there will be no such thing as locked bumpers, or the dismal business of trying to disengage two cars joined in close embrace. Who says the world does not progress?

MONTREAL.—The 17,383-ton Warwick Castle, second Union Castle passenger liner to return to peacetime service, is enroute from Southampton on her first postwar sailing to South Africa. Cunard Donaldson Limited announces. Cunard Donaldson are general agents for the Union Castle Line in Canada.

Temporarily employed in the South African Mail Service which offers express passage from England to Cape Town and Durban, the Warwick Castle will revert to the Intermediate Service upon the completion of two new 28,000-ton mail vessels now under construction at Belfast.

The Intermediate Service has scheduled calls at Las Palmas, Tenerife, Ascension and other ports enroute to and from South Africa, and it was in this service that the liner, formerly the Pretoria Castle, sailed regularly before the war.

Completely restored to her prewar standards of comfort, the ship provided accommodations for 205 First Class and 335 Tourist Class passengers.

Patience is not passive; on the contrary it is active; it is concentrated strength.—Bulwer-Lytton.

Patience does not mean indifference. We may work and trust and wait, but we ought not to be idle or careless while waiting.—Gail Hamilton.

It is not necessary for all men to be great in action. The greatest and sublimest power is often simple patience.—Horace Bushnell.

A ten-year-old boy rushed into the shop.

"Father's being chased by a bull," he cried.

"What can I do about it?" asked the shopkeeper.

"Put a new roll of film in my camera," said the boy.

Magistrate: "But why did you break into this draper's shop four nights running?"

Defendant: "I got a new dress for my wife and she made me go back and change it three times."

Wife: "Haven't the dresses in this window a splendid finish, dear?"

Jones (glumly): "Nothing wrong with the finish. It's the starting-price that gets me!"

The rejected snailor was making his final plea.

"What," he said, "has this fellow got that I haven't?"

And the girl answered "Me".

Clerk: "These are especially strong shirts, Madam. They simply laugh at the laundry."

Customer: "I know that kind. I had some which came back with their sides split."

Once again the youthful evanee had been caught using strong language.

"Do you know, Tommy," said the harassed father-mother sadly.

"Every time I hear you swearing I get cold shivers down my back."

"Cool," exclaimed Tommy. "If you heard father you'd have froze to death!"

The manager heard that the 60-a-week clerk had a car, and asked him how he could afford it, with four children.

"Oh, that's easy," said the clerk. "There are 500 of us employed at this factory. I suffice my wages every week at a shilling a go."

"Won't you give me your telephone number?" he murmured.

"It's in the book," she said.

"Splendid," he sighed. "And what's your name?"

"That's in the book, too," she snapped.

"By jove, old boy, I couldn't believe it when I heard you were in hospital. Why last night I saw you dancing with a pretty blonde."

"Yes, so did my wife."

Smith: "I wear the trousers in my home."

Friend: "Yeah, but right after supper I notice you wear an apron over them."

"What did the calf say to the silo?"

"I don't know."

"Is my fodder in there?"

"I adore dark men."

"You'd have a splendid time in Africa."

HOLSTEIN CATTLE SHIPPED TO CHINA

QUEBEC—Canadian Holstein cattle breeders have sold 130 male animals, aged one year to 18 months, to the Chinese government, according to an announcement by the provincial agriculture ministry.

Thirteen of the bulls, whose progeny all are qualified sires, or dams with individual milk production of more than 500 pounds of butter fat a year, are destined to stock Madame Chiang Kai-Shek's herds.

SLOW CONSCIENCE

In Fredonia, Kans., an ex-school-marm sent the country school superintendent a check for $75 (full repayment of the three-month salary she had once drawn) along with a conscience-amitten confession that she had cribbed on her teacher's examination to get the job, 53 years ago.

FILMS DEPICTING WILDLIFE OF CANADA'S NATIONAL PARKS BEING TELEVIEWED

A new development in visual education dealing with wildlife in Canada's national parks took place in Washington, D.C., recently when films showing beaver in Prince Albert National Park, Saskatchewan, were televiewed from the United States Capital. Some of the beaver shown were "Little Brothers" of the late Grey Owl who occupied a cabin on the shores of Ajawaan Lake in the park. The films depict beaver building dams and houses, and storing food for the winter.

Television opens up an important field in the realm of wildlife education. The family life and habits of wild creatures in their native habitat, always make fascinating reading. But to actually see a beaver at work, a bear playing with her cubs, or an ungainly moose browsing in the willows, adds immensely to the interest of the story.

Children, and grown-ups too, who have not yet had an opportunity to visit Canada's national parks may derive a keener appreciation of the word "sanctuary", when they observe wild creatures behaving in a natural manner before the camera, little perturbed by the presence of humans. They also get a better understanding of conservation practices which are part of the national parks idea and purposes.

Most people are intrigued by the sight of creatures of the wild living in natural surroundings. Canada's great outdoor museums of wildlife will continue to rank among her chief tourist attractions, and any new development that will make them better known in the United States is of special interest to Canadians.

The televising of films depicting wildlife in Canada's national parks will also further emphasize the fact that the only kind of "shooting" permitted in these areas is with the camera.

Collars Too Tight Causes Chronic Pain

MEDFORD, Ore.—Ingemund Stenerson, local lumberman, was relieved.

Doctors at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., decided after a week of examinations that chronic pains in his neck were the fault of his handkerchiefs.

Their diagnosis said his shirt collars were too tight.
